Mrs. Coakly was about shooting her seven-month-old girl when Patrolman Faley and Detective O'Rorke, of the Butler street station, arrived. An ambulance call was turned in and Surgeon Jacobson, of the Brooklyn City Hospital, dressed the injured man's wounds.

Coakly was found lying on the bed, bleeding profusely, dressed in an undershirt and trousers. The revolver had been fired so closely as to burn and blacken his clothing. The pistol was lying on a table.

Mrs. Coakly and her baby were taken to the station-house. She and her husband give different versions of the shooting.

Mrs. Coakly is about thirty-eight years old. She was very pale as she stood before Justice Tighe, in the Butler Street Court, this morning with her babe asieep upon her breast. She was dressed rather untidily. After her plea had been taken she sat in an adjoining room. She smiled at the baby, and did not seem to realize the seriousness of the rosition.

Mrs. Coakly has been married twice. Her first husband, whose name was Salivatore, left her with five children, the oldest a girl, now nineteen years old. She says that Coakly did not work yearday, but dressed in his best clothes and left the house early in the day, saying that he was going to see some girls, and that all the girls were "stuck" on him. He did not get home until about 12.30 this morning.

Mrs. Coakly says her husband was drunk and began to abuse her. He struck her, and finally threw himself down on the bed on top of the infant, who was on the bed asleep. She remonstrated with him, but his angry retoris drove her nearly mad. She says she does not remember what happened after that until the officers came in and arrested some of his clothing and lay.

Just then Mrs. Johnson's grand-daughter came out of the house, and heard her grandmother's cry for help. Snatching up a stick of wood the brave little girl rushed into the inclosure and at the cow. The animal turned away from the old lady and prepared to attack the girl. The latter, however, never hesitated a moment, but at inst gave in and went away. By this time others in the house came to the rescue, and the injured woman was gotten out of the yard and into the house. No physician was available and Druggist E. W. Caldwell was summoned. He dressed the woman's wounds. It was found that one of the cow's horns had entered Mrs. Johnson's abdomen and inflicted a dangerous wound. Druggist Caldwell says that had the horn penetrated but a slight distance further nothing would have saved the woman's life. As it is she will recover.

EMBRUIDERERS STRIKE.

Swiss Laton Workers Demand an increase of Wages to $i a Day. The Swiss Embroiderers' Union this morning made a demand upon the manufacturers in this city and vicinity for $1 a day. The Executive Committee of the union visited the employers and asked for their answer to the demand, which had been made a week ago. In each case where the demand was refused the men walked out of the shop. The union is composed entirely of men, and has about 300 members. Each man employs two or more women to help him keep his machine in order and to fill the needles with thread.

The men declare that because of the hard times in the last two years they have not been able to make more than 32 cents a day. If business had been good they could have made at least $2 a day and last year, to prevent the manufacturers from closing their shops the union voluntarily reduced wages.
